CRASS RECORDS
PO Box 279
London N22

Christ the Movie is a video compilation of the three major films shown at Crass gigs from 1978-1984. Total running time is just under 90 minutes.

The first film - Autopsy - began the development of what was to become carefully orchestrated dimensions of multi screen film, video and audio tape at Crass' live performances.

Autopsy and Choosing Death are intense collages edited to reveal hidden aspects of familiar scenarios. A look beneath the veneer of consumer society.

The third film was produced to accompany Crass' live performances of the album Yes Sir, I Will. The album was not so much a collection of songs as it was a performance, an opera of sorts. The story it told was of Crass themselves; their motives, inspirations and accusations; their anger and their hope. A bitter attack on Thatcher's Britain in the wake of the Falklands War. The film runs 45 minutes and encompasses the entire soundtrack of Yes

Sir... Included with the video is a booklet with the complete lyrics to the album.

These films are highly emotive - direct expressions of anger and outrage, irony and disgust with a society which refuses to confront its obvious failures. They forcefully state some of the reasons for the diffuse and debilitating alienation, and the powerlessness to which many people resign themselves. Punk as Crass have defined it begins by exposing this paralysis.

Paris: May 1968
An eyewitness
Rebel Press & Dark Star
pamphlet
£1.50

This is an eye-witness account of two weeks spent in Paris during May 1968. It is what one person saw, heard or discovered during that short period. The account has no pretence at comprehensiveness. It has been written and produced in haste, its purpose being to inform rather than to analyse - and to inform quickly.

The French events have a significance that extends far beyond the frontiers of modern France. They will leave their mark on the history of that 'it couldn't happen here'. Another epoch is starting: that in which people know that revolution is possible under the conditions of modern bureaucratic capitalism.

For Stalinism too, a whole period is ending: the period during which Communist Parties in Western Europe could claim (admittedly with dwindling credibility) that they remained revolutionary organisations, but that revolutionary opportunities had never really presented themselves. This notion has now the second half of the 20th century. French bourgeois society has just been shaken to its foundations. Whatever the outcome of the present struggle, we must calmly take note of the fact that the political map of Western capitalist society will never be the same again. A whole epoch has just come to an end: the epoch during which people couldn't say, with a semblance of verisimilitude, irrevocably been swept into the proverbial 'dustbin of history'. When the chips were down, the French Communist Party and those workers under its influence proved to be the final and most effective 'brake' on the development of the revolutionary self-activity of the working class.

A full analysis of the French events will eventually have to be attempted, for, without an understanding of modern society, it will never be possible consciously to change it. But this analysis will have to wait for a while until some of the dust has settled. What can be said now is that, if honestly carried out, such an analysis will compel many 'orthodox' revolutionaries to discard a mass of outdated ideas, slogans and myths to re-assess contemporary reality; particularly the reality of modern bureaucratic capitalism, its dynamic, its methods of control and manipulation, the reasons for both its resilience and its brittleness and - most important of all - the nature of its crises. Concepts and organisations that have been found wanting will have to be discarded. The new phenomena (new in themselves or new to traditional revolutionary theory) will have to be recognised for what they are and interpreted in all their implications. The real events of 1968 will then have to be integrated into a new framework of ideas, for without this development of revolutionary theory, there can be no development of revolutionary practice - and in the long run no transformation of society through the conscious actions of men.

HAYMARKET MARTYRS

Haymarket Martyrs

The American Federation of Labor adopted an historic resolution that asserted that "eight hours shall constitute a legal day's labor from after May 1, 1886..." In the months prior to May, thousands of workers, skilled and unskilled, men and women, Negro and white, native and immigrant, organised and unorganised, were drawn into the struggle. By mid-April almost a quarter of a million industrial workers were involved in the movement.

In Chicago alone 400,000 workers went out, and more than 45,000 were granted a shorter working day without striking. Chicago was the main centre of the agitation, and in Chicago the anarchists were in the forefront of the movement. It is to no small extent due to their activities that Chicago became the outstanding labour centre of the country and made the greatest contribution to the eight-hour movement.

"At the outset, the anarchists had not looked with favor on the eight-hour demand, first, because its acceptance was 'a virtual concession that the wage system is right', and, secondly, because even if successful, the shorter working day was trivial compared to the struggle to abolish the wage-system and might even divert the energies of the workers from activity to overthrow wage slavery. But when the Chicago anarchists saw how deeply the working class was stirred and how bitterly the industrialists opposed the movement, they understood that they would have to join in the common front. As Parsons explained later, the Social Revolutionaries endorsed the eight-hour movement, 'first, because it was a class movement against domination, therefore historical and evolutionary and necessary; and secondly because we did not choose to stand aloof and be misunderstood by our fellow workers'."

The scale of injustice done the Haymarket Martyrs is well established: "A biased judge, perjured evidence, an extraordinary and indefensible theory of conspiracy, and the temper of Chicago led to the conviction. The evidence never proved their guilt." (Henry David)

They were murdered in an attempt to stem a movement that instilled terror in the American bourgeoisie. Philip S Foner's introduction to The Autobiographies of the Haymarket Martyrs provides an excellent overview to the situation and the following is culled from his work.

"On the night of May 4, 1886, a dynamite bomb was thrown into a group of policemen who had just begun to disperse a small crowd of workingmen still milling about in the Haymarket of Chicago's West Side. One policeman was killed instantly by the bomb, several others were wounded so severely that they died later. The police immediately opened fire, and before the Haymarket riot ended, several workers were killed (how many is unknown) and at least 200 were wounded.

"A wave of hysteria swept Chicago and the rest of the nation. During it a number of anarchists were indicted. Though no sound evidence proved their connection with the actual bomb-throwing, they were tried freely for their opinions. Seven men – Albert R Parsons, August Spies, Samuel J Fielden, Michael Schwab, Adolph Fischer, George Engel, Louis Lingg – were condemned to death, and one – Oscar Neebe – to fifteen years imprisonment.

"The Haymarket Affair is linked to two important developments in the post-Civil War period: the battle for the eight-hour day and the rise of the Social Revolutionary or anarchist movement. The eight-hour day was a major slogan of the labor movement."

The hysteria that gripped Chicago is expressed by the State's attorney Grinnell's summation speech to the jury:

PARSONS

LINGG

"Law is on trial. Anarchy is on trial. These men have been selected, picked out by the grand jury and indicted because they were leaders. They are no more guilty than the thousands who follow them. Gentlemen of the jury; convict these men, make examples of them, hang them and you save our institutions, our society."

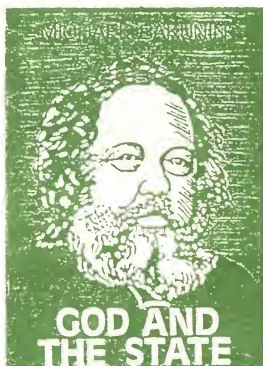

On August 19 the jury passed their verdicts and the convicted men were called upon to speak before sentencing:

"'Your Honor', began Spies who spoke first. 'In addressing this court I speak as the representative of one class to the representative of another...' He spoke for hours, refuting the charge of murder and conspiracy, charging the State with deliberately plotting to use the Haymarket tragedy as an excuse to assassinate the leaders of the working class, accusing the employers of using the same episode to destroy the eight-hour movement by murdering those whom the workers looked up to as their leaders. But he was confident that this conspiracy would not succeed:

"'If you think that by hanging us you can stamp out the labor movement...the movement from which the downtrodden millions, the millions who toil in want and misery expect salvation – if this is your opinion, then hang us! Here you will tread upon a spark, but there and there, behind you – in front of you, and everywhere, flames blaze up. It is a subterranean fire. You cannot put it out.'"

The sentences of Fielden and Schwab were commuted to life imprisonment. Lingg committed suicide by exploding a bomb in his mouth a day before execution. Parsons, Spies, Engel and Fischer were hanged on November 11, 1887. In 1893, their innocence recognised by Governor Altgeld, the imprisoned men were pardoned.

This is the publishers blurb for an English language edition of God and the State that appeared in India in the late nineteen forties. It is reprinted here exactly as it appeared.

"Communalism is the deadliest poison in the body politic of India today. Not a day passes when innocent men, women and even children do not die of the so-called religious warfare. It is strange to see the touching and pathetic appeals seemingly emerging from the very core of the hearts of the top-ranking leaders go unheeded: not a minute's thought is being given to the naked fact that stares in the face of every Indian that this religious and communal fanatical tension is withholding the dawn of liberty, making the four hundred million people a mere laughing stock for the civilised world.

"Obviously something is fundamentally wrong somewhere. Experience has shown that mere verbal appeals will not help. What is needed is proper understanding by the masses as to what exactly religion is and what possible connection it can have with the state. The well-wishers of India would do no better than to read God and the State wherein Michael Bakunin, a contemporary of Karl Marx, prominent figure in the First International, has located the place of religion in human life and its relation with the state. Written with a cool, calm and a conscientious mind, the book deserves study."

Against All War: Fifty Years of Peace News gives a real insight into an almost unparalleled achievement in radical publishing. Written in an informative and easily accessible style, Against All War moves right through Peace News' fifty year history, pulling out significant events; highlighting political trends; and pin-pointing important news coverage.

It shows those times when Peace News was a lone voice, and a voice others tried to silence. It shows too, those optimistic and inspiring times when the paper was flourishing and developing as new movements began to spring up. It documents the times when Peace News ran news 'scoops' and exclusives — and the many times it has embarrassed political authorities by making 'secrets' public. It illustrates how the authorities sometimes hauled editors into the dock, in response...

In addition, it outlines the development of political nonviolence — as seen through the pages of the paper. From the days of "peace through World Government" to the revolutionary nonviolence that was crystallised in the late '60s and '70s, it follows that development right up to the present.

Against All Wars is a brief history of one important side of the struggle for peace over the last fifty years. It is a history that will not be recorded in text books: it is a history we must claim and understand for ourselves.

In May 1985, fifteen men appeared in Sheffield Crown Court to face charges of riot and possible life imprisonment. The charges arose out of incidents at the Orgreave coking plant during the miners' strike in the previous June.

"The most serious incident of public order in this country has seen this century," was how Mr Anthony Clements, the assistant chief constable of South Yorkshire, described the events of June 18th.

Forty-eight days after the trial began it collapsed amidst a saga of perjury, forgery and vanishing statements, disappearing witnesses and police brutality — and the fifteen men walked free.

One of those men, Bernard Jackson, presents a detailed account of that evidence, of the day itself and the events which led up to it. Tony Wardle is the writer who enabled him to make public the truth of what happened at Orgreave.

In many ways it is a frightening book as its slowly unwinding drama reveals the power, preparations and role of today's police force.

This is not just an historical document, but a warning for the future: in the light of the new Public Order proposals, the attempt to abolish juries in the Criminal Justice Bill, and the attacks on the picket line at wapping, our civil liberties are under threat and must be protected at all costs.

Anton Pannekoek is the intellectual mentor of the council communist movement. Drawing particularly on the experience of the Soviets and Factory Committees in the Russian revolution and the Räte that developed after the military defeat in the Germany of 1919, Pannekoek's work developed an emphasis on the issues of state power, self-management and workers' councils.

His vision of revolution was the direct administration of society by workers' councils without the mediation of a revolutionary party. Not surprisingly, given the libertarian edge to Pannekoek's ideas, they have been considered by some as akin to syndicalism. "State socialism", he concluded "is a design for constructing society on the basis of a working class as the middle class sees it and knows it under capitalism."

Most recent interest has focused on this council communist period of his life, but prior to World War One, Pannekoek was a widely recognised figure in the mainstream of the international socialist movement. A militant in both the Dutch and German Socialist parties, he emerged with Rosa Luxemburg as a leader of the left in the SPD and was among the first to call for the forming of a third international.

By 1920, however, Pannekoek was a major critic of Leninism and he broke with the Bolshevik dominated Comintern. Under the pseudonym of John Harper he is the target of Lenin's Left-Wing Communism: An Infantile Disorder. If the working class had broken ground by the development of councils, Pannekoek thought that the Bolsheviks should be fostering them, rather than using their party's ideological influence and state power to impose industrial discipline.

Telos Press have done us a great service by the publication in English of Serge Bricaner's book. It is a thorough on his conception of marxism, on how materialist theory could be extended from the natural into the social sphere, and undoubtedly had significance in his later disputes with Lenin. Dietzgen, now a generally overlooked thinker, was ranked by Pannekoek as "third among the founders of socialist science".

For Pannekoek, marxism began work on a text that summed up his life experience: Workers' Councils. In it he sets out the knowledge which he thought would serve the class struggle in one of Europe's darkest hours: describing the place of the worker in society; the nature of the class enemy, its resources and weaknesses; how class rule developed in the concrete conditions of each country, including the specific trauma of that period, fascism. He concludes that in the offensive against capitalism, the 'old' organisations — the trade unions and political parties — as products of a previous stage of struggle could not carry the workers' movement forward. Only class organisations of a different character — the councils — were capable of effecting fundamental change.

It is to the credit of Echanges that they have managed to get this text out on a shoe-string. But surely it deserves to be published in a more durable format — comrades of the English-speaking world pledges to Prolebook Aid gladly received!

If you are an anarchist it's possible you could derive some satisfaction from sifting Pannekoek's work for the bits you find familiar and dismiss the rest. You can view him in agreement with Lenin, as a renegade from marxism, but I suggest a little effort will yield much more — access to a rich tradition of libertarian socialism with different roots to your own. Above all the challenge of materialism is one which anarchism has never faced with much conviction.

ough compendium of work from every period of Pannekoek's life, and the excellent introductory essays put the formation of his marxism in historical and intellectual context.

Pannekoek's life is all the more extraordinary given the fact that for a large part of it he was also engaged in a distinguished career as an astronomer. He was first drawn to the materialism of Marx and Engels as a student as an extension of his interest in the natural sciences. The philosophy of Joseph Dietzgen made a decisive impact was a theory of proletarian revolution or it was worthless; he rejected determinism and saw the idea of marxism based on rigid doctrines, absolute laws and predictions as "a laying down of one's arms". He would later cross swords with Lenin's philosophical work Materialism and Empirio-Criticism in a critique which sought to expose the bourgeois basis of Lenin's materialism. (Published as Lenin as Philosopher in 1938, sadly it has recently gone out of print.)

During World War Two in occupied Holland, Pannekoek

THE CONQUEST OF BREAD

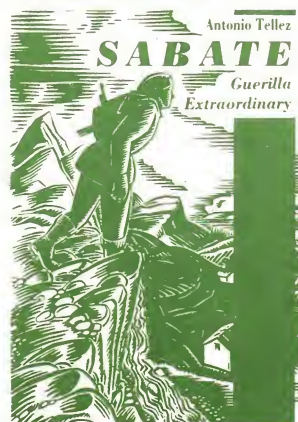

PETER KROPOTKIN

Introduction by Alfredo M. Bonanno
214 pages
ISBN No
£3.60

One of the fundamental classics of anarchism, its present day validity lies in Kropotkin's vision of the revolutionary project as a totality, something that would be impossible if it were not already in course. Within this totality the movement finds its orientation, becomes process and project in the immense task of the class struggle between exploiter and exploited. All that would be impossible if the final dream were not really starting here and now.

SABATE

GUERRILLA EXTRAORDINARY

ANTONIO TELLEZ

Translated by Stuart Christie
Introduction by Alfredo M. Bonanno
ISBN No
Price £2.95

This book tells of the life, the action and the death of anarchist guerilla Francisco Sabate in the struggle against Franco's dictatorship until he was killed in 1960. It shows the many ways it is possible to strike the enemy, no matter what colour of fascism it might be, rendering it of great validity still today.

ANARCHISM AND VIOLENCE

SEVERINO DI GIOVANNI

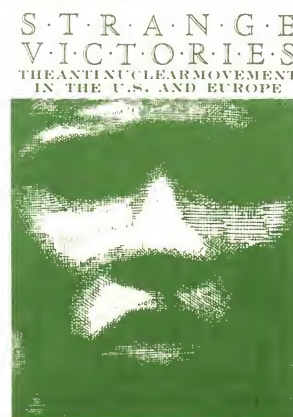

OSVALDO BAYER

Translated by Paul Sharkey
Introduction by Alfredo M. Bonanno
ISBN No
256 pages
£3.95

Through the figure of Severino Di Giovanni and his activities in Argentina in the '20s a problem which has divided the anarchist movement from its beginning is highlighted—that of violent revolutionary action against the State. The narrative form and documented accounts, supply the reader with both a knowledge of this anarchist and the little known period in which he lived and carried on his struggle.

STRANGE VICTORIES

THE ANTI-NUCLEAR MOVEMENT IN THE US AND EUROPE

MIDNIGHT NOTES

Introduction by Alfredo Bonanno
88 pages
ISBN No
£1.95

An interesting analysis of the anti-nuclear movement, it looks at its composition, class analysis (lack of it), the problem of violence, opening a much-needed debate on struggle and organisation against the nuclear project seen within that of capital as a whole.

DOCUMENTS AND CHRONOLOGY

Introduction by Jean Weir
ISBN No
60 pages
£1.20

This is a reprint of the Bratach Dubh pamphlet which is no longer available. Beginning in 1967, it shows some extent of the armed struggle carried out in Britain in the late sixties and early seventies, and repropounds the validity of the method of armed struggle against capital in all its forms.

THE A.C.F.

The ANARCHIST-COMMUNIST FEDERATION is a new, and as yet, small anarchist organisation. The A.C.F. has come about through the merger of the LIBERTARIAN - COMMUNIST DISCUSSION GROUP, the SYNDICALIST FIGHT GROUP and a number of local anarchist communist groups and individuals throughout the country.

Our aim is to create a non-sectarian, nationwide network of class struggle anarchists, in order to be able to coordinate effectively our anarchist activity. We are consciously 'political' in the sense of believing that the struggle for anarchy requires work in many areas on the basis of a definite ideological standpoint. For far too long most anarchists have pursued individual or isolated group based activities with little consistent political impact. Our aim is to attract anarchist militants into our membership organisation which will, on the basis of frequent national meetings and full democracy, decide overall orientation of the association. Alongside the benefits of a national organisation will be retained the autonomy of local group based activity.

The ANARCHIST-COMMUNIST FEDERATION has been launched in conjunction with our paper LIBERATION! It is hoped that LIBERATION! will soon be a monthly, giving communist - anarchist news, analysis and ideology. Subscriptions to LIBERATION cost £1-50 per year.

Our discussion magazine VIRUS (4 issues per year) has been published for over two years and carries articles on anarchist theory and argument. The latest issue, no. 8, contains articles on such subjects as Psychiatry and politics, Trotsky and workers control, the Royal Family, Child Abuse etc. (Subs cost £1 per year).

In addition to our periodicals, we also have several pamphlets available, they are: 'THE RUSSIAN REVOLUTION - An anarchist introduction' by A. Berkman. 40p. inc. postage.

LIBERTARIAN COMMUNIST SUPPLEMENTS - 'THE RUSSIAN REVOLUTION 1917', 'SKETCHING THE LIMITS OF TROTSKY', 'SPAIN 1936'. (22p each inc. post.)

If you would like more information about the ANARCHIST-COMMUNIST FEDERATION or would like to buy any of the above publications write to A.C.F. c/o Freedom Bookshop, 84B, Whitechapel High Street, London. E.1.7QX.

LIBERTARIAN EDUCATION

A Magazine for the Liberation of Learning

- This magazine is against authority.
- Schools and colleges use their authority to define, to grade and to discipline, in order to transform the learners into the sort of 'products' the state demands.
- In contrast Libertarian Education sees education as liberation. The learner, young or old, is the best judge of what they should learn next. In our struggle to make sense out of life, the things we most need to learn are the things we most want to learn. The liberated learner controls the process — no longer the victim.
- We don't pretend to have all the answers. Lib Ed magazine is a forum for everyone who is interested in the liberation of learning.

The Spectacle — The Skeleton Keys
A basic guide to the ideas which run through the Pocketbook Series. The Spectacle, recuperation, urbanism, specialisation, fragmentation, therapy.

60p

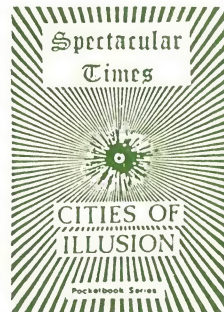

This Pocketbook is more than just another chronicle of animal misery. Between its blood-spattered covers it argues — for the first time since the Surrealists — that animal liberation is an integral part of the revolutionary project.

60 p

From the starting point 'the real state secret is the secret misery of daily life', this Pocketbook dumps ideology on its way to a revolutionary theory firmly based on the pleasure principle. The text constantly returns to the theme of dreams, desires, hopes, feelings, love, pleasure and playfulness – words which disappeared long ago from the vocabulary of 'serious' political writers: '... it seems absurd to talk about revolution ... but everything else is even more absurd since it is limited to what exists and the various ways of putting up with it'.

50p

We live in a world of carefully constructed illusions – about ourselves, each other, about power, authority, justice and daily life. These illusions are both constructed and reflected by education, advertising, propaganda, television, newspapers, speeches, elections, politics, religion, business transactions, and the courts. This false world is sustained by us when we reproduce these images and illusions in our daily life – a daily life which, in turn, is reported by the media as ‘reality’.

THE END OF PREHISTORY is an introduction to revolutionary ideas using a mixture of theory, humour and music. It was originally produced by a group in San Francisco in 1975 as a three hour radio programme. Over the past ten years many of the references have been overtaken by events or become dated in other ways. This edited version attempts to salvage all that is still important and relevant from the original.

If you want to help get Rudolf Rocker's classic work Anarcho-Syndicalism back in print then here's what to do. Send £20 to Phoenix Press and when we've raised enough money to pay the printer's bill (which will be over a thousand pounds) every subscriber will get a copy of the book. If and when the print run sells out subscribers will get the offer of their money back (though by then there'll be another title we'll be trying to raise money for). Everyone who subscribed to Alexander Berkman's The Russian Tragedy has now received their copy so we know the first part of the scheme works. Hurry now while stocks last.

I enclose £20 loan made out to Phoenix Press to help get Rudolf Rocker's Anarcho-Syndicalism back in print.

SERVICE

The Anarchist Book Service is a non-wage paying, non-profit distributing project. All excess income, after meeting costs, is used to improve the range of titles available.

HOW TO ORDER

1. Write your name and address at head of paper. This is quite important if you want your books sent to the correct place!
2. List each title, together with the author and price.
3. Total and then add postage:
UK/Ireland — add 10%
(min 15p, max £1.50)
Overseas — add 20%
(min 30p, max £3.00)
4. Make cheque/postal order payable to:
ANARCHIST BOOK SERVICE
(Overseas and Republic of Ireland customers please note payment must be in Sterling.) and send to:
BM BOOKSERV, LONDON WC1N 3XX

Please note that:
BM BOOKSERV, LONDON WC1N 3XX
is our full address and is all that need be written on the envelope. Cheques and Postal Orders should be made payable to:
ANARCHIST BOOK SERVICE

and should be 'crossed' to prevent evil-doers from benefiting by ripping off our post. Overseas (and Republic of Ireland) users are asked to pay in Sterling only. British banks have a tendency to charge unbelievably high sums to convert foreign currency, cheques and Postal Orders.

FOR

FORTNIGHTLY ON FRIDAYS

50 pence

Life at Greenham women's peace camp, prison conditions for young women, the politics of affinity groups, the struggle against the Public Order Bill, the toppling of Marcos in the Philippines, racism in the peace movement, pacifism and armed liberation struggles, harassment of gypsies, direct action at nuclear bases, food politics and animal rights...

These are just some of the issues recently covered in the pages of Peace News. Since 1936 Peace News has been an independent voice serving all those opposing war and the institutions that create war.

Now in 1986 Peace News is still providing that unique service, and is still very much a part of the movements it serves.

Whether its the latest news of government nuclear dumping plans, news reports on life at the peace camps, or the latest debates about the role, and future of, direct action, Peace News is the place to find it.

If you've not seen Peace News before, send for a free sample copy—and our publications list—to the address below. Better still, subscribe: £12 one year; £6.50 for six months. Our full rates (including overseas) are available on request.
